10 STEVEN HOGLUND,

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

13 ALLSTATE INSURANCE
14 COMPANY, et al.,

15 Defendants.

CASE NO. C23-1575JLR

ORDER

16 I. INTRODUCTION

17 Before the court are (1) Plaintiff Steven Hoglund’s motion to remand this action to 18 King County Superior Court (MTR (Dkt. # 7); see also MTR Reply (Dkt. # 19)), and 19 (2) Defendant Allstate Insurance Company’s (“Allstate”) motion for partial summary 20 judgment (MSJ (Dkt. # 9); see also MSJ Reply (Dkt. # 18)). Each party opposes the 21 other’s motion. (MTR Resp. (Dkt. # 16); MSJ Resp. (Dkt. # 15).) The court has 22 considered the motions, the parties’ submissions in support of and in opposition to the

1 motions, the relevant portions of the record, and the applicable law. Being fully advised,<sup>1</sup> 2 the court GRANTS Mr. Hoglund’s motion to remand and DENIES Allstate’s motion for 3 partial summary judgment as moot.

4 II. BACKGROUND

5 Mr. Hoglund’s claims stem from an automobile collision with an underinsured 6 motorist (“UIM”) in Bellevue, Washington in 2018. (Compl. (Dkt. # 1-1) ¶¶ 3.1-3.2.) At 7 the time, Mr. Hoglund held an automobile insurance policy through Allstate that covered 8 up to $250,000.00 for bodily injuries sustained due to UIM collisions. (Id. ¶¶ 3.4-3.5.)
 9 Following the collision, Mr. Hoglund submitted a UIM claim seeking coverage for his 10 injuries. (Id. ¶ 3.11.) Allstate assigned insurance adjuster Matt Weis to the claim. (Id.
 11 ¶ 3.12.) Mr. Weis investigated the claim and offered to settle it for $15,000, which Mr.
 12 Hoglund apparently declined. (See id. ¶¶ 3.12-3.16.)

13 Mr. Hoglund filed this lawsuit in King County Superior Court on or around 14 September 22, 2023, seeking to enforce his contract rights under the UIM policy 15 provision. (Compl. (Dkt. # 1-1) at 1, 9.) The complaint names Allstate and Mr. Weis as 16 defendants (id. ¶¶ 1.2-1.3) and raises various claims under Washington law, including 17 breach of the common law duty of good faith (id. ¶¶ 4.1-4.8). On October 13, 2023, 18 Allstate timely removed the action to this court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction.
 19 (Not. of Removal (Dkt. # 1) at 1 (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1332).) The notice of removal 20

21 <sup>1</sup> Neither party has requested oral argument (see MTR at 1; MTR Resp. at 1; MSJ at 1; 22 MSJ Resp. at 1), and the court determines that oral argument would not be helpful to its disposition of the motions, see Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(b)(4).

acknowledges that both Mr. Hoglund and Mr. Weis are residents of Washington—which ordinarily would preclude diversity jurisdiction—but states that the claims against Mr. Weis are “frivolous” with no basis in Washington law, and that Mr. Weis was fraudulently joined to prevent removal. (See id. ¶¶ 3-6 (citing Compl. ¶ 1.3 (stating that Mr. Weis “is believed to be a resident of Washington State”))); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1332 (conferring diversity jurisdiction where the action “is between” “citizens of different States”). On October 19, 2023, Mr. Hoglund filed the instant motion to remand and Allstate filed the instant motion for partial summary judgment. (See generally MTR; MSJ.) Because the issues raised in each motion overlap, the court addresses both motions in this order.

III. ANALYSIS

The parties’ motions both turn on the issue of fraudulent joinder. Allstate seeks partial summary judgment with respect to Mr. Hoglund’s claims against Mr. Weis, arguing Mr. Weis was “fraudulently joined in this matter” because “long standing Washington law” precludes the personal liability of individual insurance adjusters. (MSJ at 1.) Mr. Hoglund argues in his motion to remand that Mr. “Weis was not ‘fraudulently joined’” because Washington law does not foreclose common law bad faith claims against individual insurance adjusters. (MTR at 1-2; see also id. at 3 (stating that Mr. Hoglund “will withdraw all claims against [Mr.] Weis except the common law bad faith claim”).) Consequently, he argues, Mr. Weis was properly named as a defendant, the parties lack complete diversity, and this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, requiring remand. (Id. at 2, 10.) Mr. Hoglund’s motion is dispositive, and the court therefore

1 addresses it first. For the reasons set forth below, the court concludes that Mr. Weis was 2 not fraudulently joined and, as a result, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over 3 this action.

4 A. Legal Standard

5 The federal removal statute provides that unless otherwise prohibited, “any civil 6 action brought in a State court of which the district courts of the United States have 7 original jurisdiction, may be removed by the defendant or the defendants, to the district 8 court of the United States for the district and division embracing the place where such 9 action is pending.” 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a)(1). Federal courts strictly construe the removal 10 statute and must reject jurisdiction if there is any doubt as to the right of removal in the 11 first instance. Hawaii ex rel. Louie v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 761 F.3d 1027, 1034 (9th 12 Cir. 2014); Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992). The removing 13 defendant faces a “strong presumption” against removal and bears the burden of 14 establishing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that removal was proper. Gaus, 980 15 F.2d at 567.

16 Allstate invokes 28 U.S.C. § 1332 as the basis for original jurisdiction and 17 removal. (Not. of Removal at 1.) That statute confers diversity jurisdiction “over suits 18 for more than $75,000 where the citizenship of each plaintiff is different from that of 19 each defendant.” Hunter v. Philip Morris USA, 582 F.3d 1039, 1043 (9th Cir. 2009) 20 (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)). “Although an action may be removed to federal court only 21 where there is complete diversity of citizenship . . . ‘one exception to the requirement for 22 complete diversity is where a non-diverse defendant has been “fraudulently joined.”’” Id.

(internal citations omitted) (quoting Morris v. Princess Cruises, Inc., 236 F.3d 1061, 1067 (9th Cir. 2001)). Joinder of a non-diverse defendant is fraudulent “[i]f the plaintiff fails to state a cause of action against a resident defendant, and the failure is obvious according to the settled rules of the state.” Id. (quoting Hamilton Materials, Inc. v. Dow Chem. Corp., 494 F.3d 1203, 1206 (9th Cir. 2007)). Where a defendant has been fraudulently joined, “the district court may ignore the presence of that defendant for the purpose of establishing diversity.” Id. Conversely, “if there is a possibility that the complaint states a cause of action against any of the resident defendants, the federal court must find that the joinder was proper and remand the case to the state court.” Grancare, LLC v. Thrower ex rel. Mills, 889 F.3d 543, 548 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Hunter, 582 F.3d at 1046). “A defendant invoking federal court diversity jurisdiction on the basis of fraudulent joinder bears a ‘heavy burden’ since there is a ‘general presumption against [finding] fraudulent joinder.’” Grancare, LLC, 889 F.3d at 548 (quoting Hunter, 582 F.3d at 1046).

B. Mr. Hoglund’s Motion to Remand

Because Mr. Hoglund and Mr. Weis are both citizens of Washington, Mr. Weis’s presence defeats diversity jurisdiction unless he was fraudulently joined. Mr. Hoglund argues he has raised a viable common law bad faith insurance claim against Mr. Weis and, as a result, there was no fraudulent joinder and remand is appropriate. The court agrees with Mr. Hoglund.

Allstate’s theory of fraudulent joinder is premised on its assertion that under settled Washington law, “insureds may only sue their insurers, not the insurers’

1 employees.” (MTR Resp. at 1.) In support of this proposition, Allstate relies heavily on 2 the Washington Supreme Court’s decision in Keodalah v. Allstate Insurance Co., 449
3 P.3d 1040 (2019). (See MTR Resp. at 3, 7-9; MSJ at 4-8; Not. of Removal at 2.)

4 According to Allstate, Keodalah affirmed “that there is no theory of extra-contractual 5 liability that can be alleged against an individual adjuster [that] could give rise to a cause 6 of action,” and “[t]his Court is bound to reach the same conclusion that no theory of 7 liability—common law or otherwise—can support a cause of action as a matter of law
8 against Mr. Weis.” (MTR Resp. at 8 (citing Keodalah, 449 P.3d at 1048).)

9 Keodalah addressed “whether RCW 48.01.030 provides a basis for an insured’s 10 bad faith and Consumer Protection Act (CPA), chapter 19.86 RCW, claims against an 11 employee claims adjuster.” 449 P.3d at 1043; see also RCW 48.01.030 (imposing 12 statutory duty of good faith upon insurers). The Washington Supreme Court answered in 13 the negative, holding (1) “that RCW 48.01.030 does not create an implied cause of action 14 for insurance bad faith” against individual claims adjusters, and (2) that individual claims 15 adjusters cannot be held personally liable for per se CPA claims premised on violations 16 of WAC 284-30-330 or RCW 48.01.030. Keodalah, 449 P.3d at 1046-48. In other 17 words, the court held that the plaintiff-insured could not assert statutory bad faith
18 insurance or per se CPA claims against individual insurance adjusters. That Keodalah 19 addressed only statutory claims is especially evident given that the court rooted its 20 analysis in large part in the text of RCW 48.01.030 and WAC 284-30-330 as well as the 21 history of RCW 48.01.030. See id. at 1045-47.

1           Importantly, as Mr. Hoglund argues (MTR at 5-9), Keodalah did not address or 2 analyze whether an insured may bring a common law bad faith insurance claim against an 3 individual insurance adjuster in Washington. In a dissenting opinion that garnered four 4 votes, Justice Mary I. Yu recognized the limits of the Keodalah majority’s holding, 5 noting that the plaintiff-insured had raised both statutory and common law bad faith
6 claims but that the majority failed to even acknowledge the latter claim. Keodalah, 449
7 P.3d at 1050-51, 1054 (Yu, J., dissenting). Justice Yu would have addressed the viability 8 of the common law claim as it was “a matter of first impression” that was properly before 9 the court. Id. at 1051. And Justice Yu would have held that such a claim is viable as 10 against an individual insurance adjuster based on Washington case law, “logic, common 11 sense, justice, and policy.” Id.

12           The court concludes that Allstate has not carried its heavy burden of 13 demonstrating that removal was proper based on fraudulent joinder. It is not “obvious” 14 that Mr. Hoglund failed to state a claim against Mr. Weis under “the settled rules of” 15 Washington law because Allstate’s cited cases do not preclude Mr. Hoglund’s common 16 law bad faith insurance claim as a matter of law, and that claim remains viable under 17 current precedent. Hunter, 582 F.3d at 1043 (quoting Morris, 236 F.3d at 1067). While 18 Keodalah foreclosed statutory bad faith and per se CPA claims against individual 19 adjusters such as Mr. Weis, the decision expressly left open the possibility that individual 20 adjusters may be held liable for common law bad faith claims. See Keodalah, 449 P.3d at 21 1044-48. The issue remains an open question of Washington law, and the fact that four 22 Washington Supreme Court justices indicated they would recognize the viability of a

1 common law bad faith claim against an individual insurance adjuster supports this court's 2 conclusion that such a claim is at the very least "possibl[e]" in Washington. Grancare,
3 LLC, 889 F.3d at 548. See Keodalah, 449 P.3d at 1051 (Yu, J., dissenting).

4 Allstate's other cited cases do not merit a contrary conclusion. For example, the 5 Washington Court of Appeals held in International Ultimate v. St. Paul Fire & Marine 6 Insurance Co. that "the CPA does not contemplate suits against employees of insurers" 7 and dismissed a common law negligence claim against an individual employee where the 8 plaintiff "fail[ed] to present evidence that its insurers acted negligently or in bad faith."
9 87 P.3d 774, 779, 787 (Wash. Ct. App. 2004). But the court did not hold that common 10 law bad faith claims against individual insurance agents are barred as a matter of 11 Washington law. See generally id.; see also Merriman v. Am. Guarantee & Liab. Ins.
12 Co., 396 P.3d 351, 363 n.8 (Wash Ct. App. 2017) (rejecting the proposition that 13 International Ultimate limited the tort liability of individual insurance agents). Allstate 14 does not cite a single Washington case that so holds. (See, e.g., MTR Resp. at 4 (first 15 citing Tank v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 715 P.2d 1133, 1135 (Wash. 1986) (holding 16 that "a third party claimant has no right of action against an insurance company for 17 breach of [the] duty of good faith," but not addressing whether such a claim is available 18 to an insured as against an individual agent (emphasis added)); then citing Burnham v.
19 Com. Cas. Ins. Co., 117 P.2d 644, 650-51 (Wash. 1941) (concerning alleged bad faith by 20 an insurance company, not an individual claims adjuster)).)

21 Moreover, several decisions of this court have agreed that Keodalah left open the 22 question whether Washington law permits an insurer to assert a common law bad faith

1 claim against an individual insurance adjuster. See, e.g., Leonard v. First Am. Prop. &
2 Cas. Ins. Co., No. C19-6089RBL, 2020 WL 634430, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 11, 2020)
3 (holding the defendant failed to demonstrate fraudulent joinder because Keodalah “only 4 addressed the statutory duty of good faith and left the plaintiff’s common law duty of 5 good faith claim unaddressed,” and therefore plaintiffs’ claims against individual 6 insurance adjusters had a possibility of success); Nikfard v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 7 No. C19-1001RBL, 2020 WL 6492926, at *1 (W.D. Wash. July 16, 2020) (“[A]s this 8 Court has held several times now, [Keodalah] did not address common law bad faith or 9 non-per se CPA claims.”). Notably, United States District Judge Tana Lin addressed an 10 identical issue involving Allstate and Mr. Weis in Xu v. Weis, No. 22-0118-TL, 2023 WL 11 2142683 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 21, 2023). In Xu, the plaintiff sued Allstate to recover under 12 a UIM insurance policy and Allstate removed the matter to this court. Id. at *1. In 13 response to Judge Lin’s order to show cause why the matter shouldn’t be remanded to 14 King County Superior Court, Allstate argued that Mr. Weis was fraudulently joined as a 15 defendant because Keodalah precludes claims against individual insurance adjusters. Id.
16 at *1, *3. Judge Lin closely examined Keodalah and concluded that it does not foreclose 17 common law bad faith insurance claims against individual insurance adjusters in 18 Washington. Id. at *5. She further noted that “an absence of cases affirmatively 19 recognizing a common law bad faith claim against individual adjusters does not preclude 20 the existence of such a claim.” Id.

21         The court finds Judge Lin’s analysis to be thorough, well-reasoned, and highly 22 persuasive. Accordingly, and for the reasons already stated, the court joins Judge Lin in

1 concluding that Washington law does not presently bar common law bad faith insurance 2 claims against individual insurance adjusters and Allstate thus fails to demonstrate that 3 Mr. Weis was fraudulently joined. Because the parties lack complete diversity, this court
4 lacks subject matter jurisdiction. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). The court therefore GRANTS Mr.
5 Hoglund's motion to remand. The court DENIES Allstate's motion for partial summary 6 judgment as moot.

7 IV. CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS Mr. Hoglund's motion to remand 9 (Dkt. # 7) and DENIES Allstate's motion for partial summary judgment (Dkt. # 9) as 10 moot. The Clerk is DIRECTED to REMAND this action to King County Superior Court.
